

ABSTRACT

A method and system for the sampling, or scientific collection of random, representative data, from a population of individuals when the primary method of gathering the responses to a given survey comprising a set of questions contained in a questionnaire with the purpose of 5 identifying the attitudes of the given population is over the Internet.